In 1934 Bureau of Indian Affairs critic John Collier was appointed Commissioner of Indian Affairs by Franklin D. Roosevelt. Among Collier's initiatives was finishing the dismantlement of the boarding school system, returning children to their families. In 1934 letters went out to Pine Ridge residents explaining the new attendance plans. The letter signed by Collier that Keva Morgan received praised her housekeeping and stated "Young children are better for having a mother's care in their own home. No boarding school, however good, can be as good for normal children as their own home can be." Morgan fired back a response:

Received
DEC 7 1934
Commissioner of Indian Affairs
Washington, D.C.

Miss Morgan
Pine Ridge
So. Dak.
Dec. 2, 1934.

Dear Mr. Collier,

I have received your letter of November 24, and I am certainly most disappointed at the contents of your letter. You stated at the time of your visit to our Reservation that you were a friend of the Indians, and that you were going to try to do something to help them. The educational five point plan that you have forced upon the Indians this year has done nothing but cause great sorrow and grief for very, very many Indians on this Reservation. I have used the word "forced" because the Indians themselves were not consulted or asked about your new educational plan. I am sure that if they were asked they would not have approved of it. Now it is being forced on the poor Indians and they have no one to come to their help. Your social worker, Miss, Madsen, is deeply hated by many a poor Indian mother and father. She is hated because she is she tell us many lies. She makes us many promises, but she does not keep them. We Indians can prove that she is a liar. She is working for you. If you keep such people working for you, we Indians cannot think very well of you.

As for my home, I try to keep it as neat and clean as possible, but try to picture to yourself, Mr. Collier, nine people living in a little, one room log cabin. Children cannot be raised well under such conditions. Then there is the question of food and clothes. My husband can only earn $24.00 a month. Can you or any one else feed and cloth so many on such a salary? If I go to the Office here for food or clothing, I am told that I am only 1/8 Indian so that the Indian Office cannot help me. If I go to the Red Cross office, I am told that I am an Indian and that the Agent will take care of me. I notice too that you say in your letter that because my little boy Duane is only 1/8 Indian that you cannot do anything for him. The Indian office cannot pay his tuition. I would like to know just why, Mr. Collier. My boy is classified as an Indian, therefore, he should be entitled to the use of Indian money for his education. Where is your proof that he is not?

There will be much suffering on this Reservation this winter because of your plan, Mr. Collier. Sooner or later it will reach the ears of the President. He may not think so well of your plan. We Indians feel that your plan is robbing us of our rights. We are going to fight it.

Yours,

Mrs. Keva Morgan

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

In the files of the first section of Records of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, Central Classified Files, 1907–1939, Series D: Education, Part 2: Correspondence and Reports on Reservation Day and Boarding Schools, Indian Administrator Charles J. Rhoads summarized the challenges of the Bureau in his 1931 annual report:

“[I]f the Indian Service were starting afresh on the task of Indian education ... it would employ other methods than some of those that have been employed—it would not use to any extent the reservation, “rations,” or distant boarding schools for young children. But we are not starting afresh, and can not; one kind of philosophy and one kind of system have been established for a long time. The basic Indian Service educational problem, therefore, is to work over from a more or less institutional conception of education to one that is local and individual. It means abandoning boarding schools wherever possible, eliminating small children from the larger boarding schools, setting up day schools or making arrangements with local public schools to receive these children, and directing the boarding schools into specialized purposes, at least partly vocations; in the meantime all these boarding schools ... should be made as effective educationally as it is possible to make them, utilizing Indian arts and crafts and Indian culture generally wherever these exist or can be revived, and developing throughout the service at all levels a staff of workers who understand the new point of view.” (Section A: Albuquerque through Pima, Reel 28, Frame 0719)

Section B: Pine Ridge through Zuni unsurprisingly finds the administrators and staff wrestling with the same issues on other reservations caught in an era of difficult transition. The files include correspondence, reports, budgets, case studies, school newsletters, and photographs exchanged between forty Indian agencies and schools and the Bureau of Indian Affairs headquartered in Washington, D.C. Prominent correspondents include administrators John Collier, F. H. Abbott, Charles H. Burke, Charles J. Rhoads, Edgar B. Meritt, Hervey B. Peairs, Paul L. Fickinger, and C. F. Hauke; educational field agents Samuel H. Thompson, Carrie A. Lyford, S. A. M. Young, and Edna Groves; and numerous local administrators, principals, teachers, social workers, parents, and even students.

Much of the correspondence concerns the business of running hundreds of schools scattered in rural areas across the country: constructing and repairing school buildings, updating equipment to offer the modern conveniences or sanitation benefits of sewer systems and washing machines, and ensuring sufficient school farm and livestock production to feed the students. These details may seem mundane, but taken together they provide incredible detail about the physical environment of students and teachers. The reader can clearly picture bunk beds squeezed together on sleeping porches, government-provided clothing students donned every morning (one report compares the material to cheese cloth), the type and placement of windows for daydreaming in the classroom, and the lunchtime meal served from the kitchen. The files include floor plans, equipment brochures, contracts with local laborers, menus and detailed budgets.

Not all of these reports were matter of fact or trouble free. School meals were often under funded, or the local produce and milk supply deemed insufficient. In 1913 former teacher turned field agent S. A. M. Young hotly wrote about conditions on the Pine Ridge Reservation:

At a number of the day schools I found there was no flour with which to make bread for the children. One teacher had been without for three weeks; others were buying flour personally. This condition has all along been a handicap to the day schools on Pine Ridge. ... It is really deplorable ... Mr. Duncan tells me he has asked for more flour and it has been denied by the Office. These schools are the cheapest and among the most efficient in the Service. They ought to have plenty of rations. They should have more flour and more sugar, and they should have an allowance of fresh beef. Hungry children can not make satisfactory progress. Will not the Office remedy this? It is not a theory with me; I know from actual experience that these children are hungry at school ... Their parents are poor, unspeakably poor in some instances. (Reel 1, Frame 0109)

The Bureau was not always the culprit in failing to provide for students. Local administrators were also apt to downplay student needs, or even outright discourage assistance, as William C. Willahan, superintendent of the Sisseton Agency, did in 1924 when Edgar B. Meritt suggested he pay attention to the issues of school lunches and proper clothing for needy children. Willahan replied:

Every effort has been made to see that the Indian children have proper clothing to wear to school, provided they had funds to their credit or their parents had funds to allow the purchase of clothes...[T]o start this would mean a long step backward. Sooner or later, they must learn that they must save during the years of plenty. In spite of all efforts...they have not conserved but have wasted, they [sic] same is true of white people. They have wasted now they are paying as the same as the white people are paying the penalty. ...

I have given [school lunches] quite a good deal of thought and I have been unable to decide as to whether it would be best or not ... These people must learn [sic] the lesson of supporting their children, providing them with the necessary clothes, provisions, [sic] etc. While noon day lunch would no doubt benefit some of the children, yet it is a step backwards. (Reel 16, Frames 1021–1022)

Reservation superintendents also might conceal information in their school reports to protect local principals, or deflect scrutiny. Such was the case in 1930 on the Pine Ridge Reservation when it was discovered that superintendent Ernest W. Jermack had known about an incident in 1925 in which a ball and chain were padlocked to a student's leg to punish him for running away. The episode was the subject of an exposé in Good Housekeeping four years later at which time Jermack claimed ignorance. Under scrutiny from a Senate investigating committee he admitted he had seen the shackled student and angrily told principal John J. Guyer to dispose of the apparatus, but he had not reported it, or other abuse to his superiors.

School inspections also focused on teacher performance and classroom instruction, with field agents sitting in during classes and taking notes on everything from decorations to the textbooks to the volume of the students' voices. Teachers created interdisciplinary lesson plans that blended vocational and agricultural education traditional subjects. An account of a chicken-based lesson plan from 1938 demonstrates many skills may be taught through fowl husbandry.

Reports to the main office extended beyond the classroom, however, with social workers paying visits to student homes and writing detailed, census-like reports on the conditions of their home and personal details of their families. The document below describes the Stevens family living on the Kickapoo Reservation in 1931.

Indians also have a voice in the collection, occasionally appearing as teachers, and often petitioning for new schools, or advocating on behalf of their children for enrollment or tuition assistance. One standout letter highlights the complicated times Charles J. Rhoads alluded to in the passage at the beginning of this note. Two years later BIA critic John Collier was appointed Commissioner of Indian Affairs by Franklin D. Roosevelt. Among Collier's initiatives was finishing the dismantlement of the boarding school system, returning children to their families. In 1934 letters went out to Pine Ridge residents explaining the new attendance plans. The letter signed by Collier that Keva Morgan received praised her housekeeping and stated “Young children are better for having a mother’s care in their own home. No boarding school, however good, can be as good for normal children as their own home can be” (Reel 2, Frame 0770). Morgan fired back a response:

You stated at the time of your visit to our Reservation that you were a friend of the Indians, and that you were going to try to do something to help them. The educational five point plan that you have forced upon the Indians this year has done nothing but cause great sorrow and grief for very, very many Indians on this Reservation. I have used the word “forced” because the Indians themselves were not consulted or asked about your new educational plan....I try to keep [my home] as neat and clean as possible, but try to picture for yourself, Mr. Collier, nine people living in a little, one room log cabin. Can you or any one else feed and cloth [sic] so many on such a salary? If I go to the Office here for food or clothing, I am told that as I am only 1/8 Indian so that the Indian Office cannot help me. If I go to the Red Cross office, I am told that I am an Indian and that the Agent will take care of me...We Indians feel that your plan is robbing us of our rights. We are going to fight it. (Reel 2, Frame 0767).

Letters like these tell the story behind the policies in a defining time in American Indian history. The issues discussed here, and many others found within the folders, make this collection a valuable resource for the study of American Indians and early twentieth century education. Researchers will also be interested in Part A of this section, covering schools in the same time period on reservations Albuquerque through Pima. # SOURCE NOTE

The materials in this microform publication are from Record Group 75, Records of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, Entry 121: Central Classified Files, 1907–1939, in the possession of the National Archives, Washington, D.C. This publication consists of the documents composing decimal numbers 806 (Reservation, Day and Boarding Schools) for the Pine Ridge through Zuni tribes, jurisdictions, agencies, and/or reservations listed in the Editorial Note.

EDITORIAL NOTE

The Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) discontinued the practice of maintaining separate ready-reference volumes of incoming and outgoing correspondence in August 1907. Thereafter, the BIA filed correspondence according to a decimal-subject classification system, called the Central Classified Files. File numbers used to access correspondence in the old ready-reference volumes, continued to be assigned to letters in order of receipt. In addition, documents were assigned to a particular subject classification and to a jurisdiction. The jurisdictions were mainly the field units of the BIA: agencies, schools, hospitals, sanitariums, warehouses, and other institutions. There were separate designations for tribes, geographical areas, and for a few special topics (i.e., liquor traffic). In addition, there was an “Indian Office” designation for records relating to the central office of the BIA and a “General Service” designation for general administrative records not relating to any particular jurisdiction. This classification scheme allowed for the expeditious handling of the influx of documentation from both the jurisdictions and the tribal governments. This scheme consisted of a number of subject headings. Each heading was further subdivided by specific topics or aspects of the main subject heading.

The Central Classified Files for this microfilm product span the years 1907 to 1939. Included are letters received, copies of letters sent, reports, memoranda, minutes, petitions, leases, contracts, affidavits, applications, certificates, licenses, permits, bonds, wills, other legal documents, statistical tables, circulars, accounting records, clippings, photographs, diagrams and blueprints grouped into the individual field units of the bureau, arranged alphabetically by name of jurisdiction, tribe, reservation, and/or agency. The records for each jurisdiction are arranged according to a decimal classification system. Within each classification there are individual dossiers or files of records relating to a specific subject. These files are arranged chronologically and then by file number of the first or “base” letter filed. The individual documents within a file are generally arranged in chronological order. All documents for the tribes, jurisdictions, agencies, and/or reservations listed below have been filmed in their entirety. A very small number of jurisdictions will not have documentation for one or more of the decimal numbers listed above.

PRINCIPAL CORRESPONDENTS INDEX

The following index is an alphabetical listing of the principal correspondents in this microform publication. The first number after each entry refers to the reel, while the four-digit number following the colon refers to the frame number at which a particular file folder containing the document from the source begins. Hence, 1: 0001 directs the researcher to the folder that begins at Frame 0001 of Reel 1. By referring to the Reel Index, which constitutes the initial section of this guide, researchers will find a document list including folder titles and substantive issues in the order in which they appear in the film.

SUBJECT INDEX

The following index is a guide to the major topics in this microform publication. The first number after each entry refers to the reel, while the four-digit number following the colon refers to the frame number at which the file containing information on the subject begins. Hence, 18: 0882 directs researchers to frame 0882 of Reel 18. By referring to the Reel Index, which constitutes the initial segment of this guide, the researcher will find topics listed in the order in which they appear on the film.
