DESCRIPTION OF THE ARRANGEMENT OF THE COLLECTION AND COMPLETE REEL LIST

The John Collier Papers have been arranged in four parts, each part representing a significant career period in Collier's life. The parts are divided as follows:

Part I.	1922-1933
Part II.	1933-1945
Part III.	1945-1956
Part IV.	1957-1968

Each of these four parts and their various series will be described in detail. The reel list for each series of each of the four parts will follow the series' descriptions. The use of the asterisk "*" in the reel lists for the various correspondence series in Parts II-IV indicates more than ten items to or from the individual listed. In Part I the number of letters to and from an individual, where known, are enclosed in parentheses and follow the dates for the correspondence.

A part and item frame number, i.e., "I:47," has been assigned to each entry on the reel lists. Each of the four parts starts with frame number one. These part and item frame numbers relate directly to the reel lists in this guide. An automatic frame counter was also used for each reel, with each reel beginning with number one.

Excluded from the microfilm edition were subject files of printed materials which were gathered by Collier or his staff. Most of these excluded files were in Parts II and III. The contents of these subject files are not germane to an understanding of Collier or his work.

PART I. 1922-1933

The materials contained in this part of the John Collier Papers, 1922-1933, chiefly concern Collier's affiliation with the American Indian Defense Association (AIDA). Shortly after the Association's official incorporation in May 1923, Collier became its executive secretary, and he served in this capacity until 1933 when he resigned to become Commissioner of Indian Affairs. With few exceptions the materials from this period deal with Indian affairs and the work done on behalf of the Indians by the AIDA and other concerned organizations and individuals.

Part I is divided into five series as follows:

- Series I Correspondence of John Collier, 1922-1933
- Series II Correspondence and Papers of Others, 1907-1937
- Series III Subject File, 1914-1933
- Series IV Office File of the AIDA, 1922-1933
- Series V Writings and Research Materials, 1903-1933

Each of these series will be described. The complete reel list for each series follows the description for that series.

SERIES I CORRESPONDENCE OF JOHN COLLIER, 1922-1933

This series pertains almost exclusively to Indian matters. In particular, there is a large amount of correspondence dealing with the Pueblo Indians, who were of special concern to Collier. Correspondents include prominent lawyers (Louis Marshall, Richard H. Hanna), United States senators (Lynn Frazier), congressmen (James A. Frear), authors (Mabel Dodge Luhan, Elizabeth Shepley Sergeant), and others who devoted their energies to Indian causes.

Correspondence in this series is arranged alphabetically by the name of the author of the letter or by the name of the person to whom the letter is addressed. Letters for each correspondent are arranged in chronological order. Unidentified letters have been placed at the end of the series. Miscellaneous letters have been placed in folders for each letter of the alphabet.

Note: Except where indicated, correspondence of Indians of the Pueblos of New Mexico have been filed under the pueblo to which they belong.

SERIES II CORRESPONDENCE AND PAPERS OF OTHERS,
1907-1919, (1922-1933), 1937

This series contains letters exchanged between correspondents other than John Collier. In general, the letters are concerned with the same issues that are dealt with in Series I, and they appear, for the most part, to have been sent to Collier either by the author of the letter or by its recipient for the purpose of keeping him informed on matters of interest to him in his capacity as executive secretary of the AIDA. It is often difficult to tell exactly how these letters reached Collier. The following persons appear to have sent him significant quantities of their correspondence:

Stella M. Atwood
Alida C. Bowler
Charles de Y. Elkus
Haven Emerson
Charles Fahy
Lynn J. Frazier
James A. Frear
Howard S. Gans
Chauncey S. Goodrich
Albert A. Grorud

Richard H. Hanna and Fred E. Wilson,
Attorneys at Law
John R. Haynes
Antonio Luhan
Mabel Dodge Luhan
Nathan R. Margold
Louis Marshall
Lewis Meriam
Elizabeth Shepley Sergeant
James W. Young

Of particular interest in this series are the papers and correspondence of Elizabeth Shepley Sergeant. Her correspondence contains original letters to and from such notables as Ernest Gruening, A.A. Berle, and Herbert Croly. Her papers include notes, articles, stories, and a typescript of a play.

This series has been further divided in three sections, A-C.

A. Correspondence of Others, Individual (no. 181-188) - A number of individuals sent Collier large amounts of correspondence of others. For each of these individuals a separate section has been set up containing all of their correspondence filed chronologically. These individuals include:

Stella M. Atwood
Charles de Y. Elkus
Haven Emerson
James A. Frear

Richard H. Hanna and Fred E. Wilson,
Attorneys at Law
Antonio Luhan
Mabel Dodge Luhan
Louis Marshall

Note: In cases where a letter has been sent from one of the above individuals to another it has been filed with the recipient of the letter.

B. Correspondence and Papers of Elizabeth Shepley Sergeant (no. 189-200) - The correspondence in this section is arranged alphabetically by the name of the author of the letter or by the name of the person to whom the letter is addressed. The letters for each correspondent are in chronological order. Following the correspondence are miscellaneous Sergeant papers, including notes, articles, and other writings. These are arranged alphabetically.

C. Correspondence of Others, General (no. 201) - This includes correspondence of numerous individuals arranged chronologically.

Since individuals sent the correspondence in this series to Collier mainly as a supplement to their direct correspondence with him, this series is closely related to Series I, "Correspondence of John Collier," and might best be used in conjunction with that series.

Note: Additional correspondence of others may be found in Series III, "Subject File," under the topics:

California Court of Claims Bill
Flathead Indians powersite controversy
peyote

SERIES III SUBJECT FILE, 1914, 1919-1920, (1922-1933)

This series contains notes, drafts of speeches, memoranda, circulars, newsclippings, and other materials grouped together by subject. The subject headings are arranged alphabetically. Materials under the sub-heading, "Pueblo lands controversy," are in chronological order.

Accompanying some of the subject categories are lists of related correspondence which are filed in Series I, "Correspondence of John Collier." Since no attempt has been made to determine the subject matter of all the correspondence in the collection, these lists may not be complete and therefore should be considered only as guides to some of the more significant correspondence relative to a particular subject. The following subject groups contain correspondence lists:

- California Court of Claims Bill (no. 206-207)
- Louis C. Cramton (no. 213-214)
- Flathead Indians powersite controversy (no. 216-229)

PART II. 1933-1945

This second part of the John Collier Papers covers the years, 1933-1945, when Collier served as Commissioner of Indian Affairs. Much of the material deals with the Wheeler-Howard Bill, which formed the basis of Collier's "Indian New Deal." There is also a large amount of material on the Pueblo Indians of the Southwest.

This part of the papers is not, however, a complete record of Collier's term as Commissioner of Indian Affairs. In his later years Collier would answer most requests for information about his term as Commissioner in the following manner: "I possess no papers. Leaving the Indian Office in 1945, I took no records with me; and such fragments of record as I have possessed were never assorted or filed." (TLC to D.L. Parman 1965 Jan 18) Collier obviously did take some records with him, but these papers definitely do not present a complete record for the years, 1933-1945. What material there is has been divided into four series:

- Series I Correspondence, 1933-1945
- Series II Memoranda and Reports, 1933-1945
- Series III Commissioner's Subject File, 1933-1945
- Series IV Addresses and Writings, 1933-1945

Each of these series will be described. The complete reel list for each series follows the description for that series.

SERIES I CORRESPONDENCE, 1933-1945

This series is a fairly complete record of Collier's term as Commissioner of Indian Affairs. Collier's office staff appear to have had a rather complex filing system for correspondence, but the original order was lost when the papers were packed for storage.

This series is divided into two sections: an alphabetical file and a chronological file. The alphabetical file contains letters sent to Collier and the office of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs. This correspondence is arranged alphabetically by author, with miscellaneous letters filed under a letter of the alphabet. Extra copies of some of Collier's outgoing letters are also found in this series filed under the name of the addressee. This section is probably not a full record of Collier's incoming correspondence as Commissioner, although earlier years are more complete than later years.

The chronological file consists of carbon copies of Collier's outgoing letters and memoranda filed chronologically by year, month, and day. Included are carbon copies of letters and memoranda of some of his staff.

This series also includes some correspondence of Elizabeth Shepley Sergeant, which is arranged alphabetically by author and filed under, "Sergeant, Elizabeth Shepley."

Collier corresponded with a wide variety of people, but the most significant correspondence is with Indian Service employees and various "friends of the Indian." Much of the correspondence from the years 1933 and 1934 is concerned with the problems of establishing Collier as Commissioner and launching his extensive reforms. There is a great deal of correspondence on this and related subjects with Indians and friends of the Indian, including: Stella M. Atwood, Gertrude Bonnin, Charles de Young Elkus, Richard Henry Hanna, Allan Garland Harper, Anna Wilmarth Ickes, Harold LeClaire Ickes, Oliver LaFarge, Mabel Dodge Luhan, Elizabeth Shepley Sergeant, and Walter Victor Woehlke.

Much of the correspondence in the later years is concerned with the administrative and personnel problems that plagued Collier in his attempt to reform the agency. Much of the correspondence is with Indian Service personnel reporting on trouble with employees and administrative inefficiencies. There is significant correspondence on this and related topics with Sophie D. Aberle, Louis Gay Balsam, C.E. Faris, Sally Lucas Jean, Floyd W. LaRouche, Roy O. Nash, and William Zimmerman.

Other topics of interest are Navajo stock reduction and soil conservation, and a dispute with Mabel Dodge Luhan over the administration of the United Pueblo Agency. There is also some correspondence chronicling the genesis and development of the ideas that resulted in the establishment of the Institute of Ethnic Affairs, which Collier headed after his retirement in 1945. Also of interest is the extensive correspondence between Collier and Otto Lomavitu, a Hopi Indian jailed in the 1930's for statutory rape.

SERIES II MEMORANDA AND REPORTS, 1933-1945

Memoranda, 1933-1937, and the bi-weekly reports, 1933-1939, were prepared by Collier for Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes and his assistants. Both the memoranda and the reports are a convenient source for information on the problems and activities of the Indian Service.

The memoranda and reports are arranged chronologically. The bi-weekly reports were discontinued by Secretary Ickes in 1939. There are similar materials for 1938 to 1945 filed in Series I under "Ickes, Harold Le Claire."

SERIES III COMMISSIONER'S SUBJECT FILE, 1933-1945

This series contains fragments of what probably were the massive files of the Commissioner's office. Most of the material in this series deals with the Wheeler-Howard Bill and Collier's efforts to secure its approval by the Congress and by the Indians of the United States.

A large portion of material in this series deals with surveys of the social, economic, and political conditions of many of the Pueblo Indian tribes of the Southwest. These surveys were conducted for Collier by the author and Indian expert, Elizabeth Shepley Sergeant. Also included in this series are many of Sergeant's notes and reports.

In addition, this series contains materials relating to the dispute between Collier and Mabel Dodge Luhan, and to the origin of the Institute of Ethnic Affairs.

The materials in this series have been grouped into four subject areas. First is material relating to Indian tribes or to groups of Indians, which is arranged alphabetically by name of Indian tribe or group (no. 445-495). Second is a large group of minutes of meetings, reports on tribal conferences, drafts of Congressional bills, and press releases relating to the Wheeler-Howard Bill (no. 496-527). Third is material relating to other Indian matters (no. 528-557). This material is arranged alphabetically by subject. Fourth is material relating to non-Indian matters (no. 558-561), which includes early papers on the founding of the Institute of Ethnic Studies.

PART III 1945-1960

Part III is divided into five series as follows:

- Series I Correspondence, 1944-1957
- Series II Programs and Projects, 1937-1958
- Series III Office File, 1942-1960
- Series IV Addresses and Writings, 1943-1957
- Series V Subject File

Although the materials in these series cover the years 1937-1960, the bulk of the material dates from 1945-1956. The first two series are closely related and should be used in conjunction. The correspondence in Series I largely relates to the IEA's programs and projects, which are the focus of Series II. Some correspondence which was originally filed with material in Series II has been removed and placed in Series I. When this was done a list of the removed correspondence was filed in the appropriate section of Series II. This list will direct researchers to most, although not necessarily all, correspondence relating to a certain topic.

This third part of the John Collier Papers covers the years, 1945-1960, and deals with the Institute of Ethnic Affairs (IEA). The Institute, founded by Collier in 1945, was described in its prospectus as an "action research agency created to find and to achieve solutions to problems within and between white and colored peoples, cultural minority groups, and dependent peoples at home and abroad." Although most of Collier's experience as executive secretary of the American Indian Defense Association and as Commissioner of Indian Affairs had been with North American natives, his concerns were worldwide. He was interested in the native populations of Central and South America, Africa, Asia, and the Pacific Islands. Of special concern to him were non-self-governing territories and dependencies of the United States. The Institute of Ethnic Affairs was to be a vehicle for Collier to express his views on these topics and translate his concerns into effective action.

These concerns, however, were not Collier's alone. Among the Institute's founders, directors, and members were many well-known scholars and public figures, including Louis Adamic, Roger Nash Baldwin, Felix S. Cohen, Clyde Kluckhorn, Carey McWilliams, Eleanor Roosevelt, and Clarence Senior.

Collier envisioned the Institute as an expansive social science research agency that would explore many areas ignored by other government and private organizations. The Institute began with an impressive list of proposed projects. For all of these projects Collier stressed the importance of "action research," a method that shared the task of research with the people whose lives were under study. He wanted to apply this technique--which he had used as Commissioner of Indian Affairs--to worldwide studies in health, education, economics, politics, and conservation.

The Institute's major area of concern was the administration of American territories and dependencies, which included at that time Guam, Samoa, and Alaska. Collier was concerned that dependent peoples be treated fairly and respectfully and that policies be adopted that would end military rule where it existed and promote eventual self-rule. In addition, the Institute planned a study of the administration of Indian affairs in the United States which Collier hoped would be a useful source of information for the administration of other native peoples.

Other projects proposed by the Institute included a study of inter-racial cooperation in the Armed Forces, a study of Mexican labor in the United States, and a study of the impact of foreign economic policies on native populations. An examination of Israel within the geographic, political, economic and ethnic context of the Middle East was also under consideration.

The Institute was unable, however, to pursue many of these projects. Contemporary events and world and national politics forced it to concentrate on some projects, abandon some, and initiate others. Collier was unable to work on many planned projects because his time was unexpectedly consumed in various campaigns and crusades. Materials on these campaigns and programs conducted by the Institute are included in Series II of Part Three.

Although the Institute had a board of directors and many influential members, Collier was its motivating force and prime spokesman. On the other hand, Collier received a great deal of support from several assistants who staffed the Institute's Washington office. They handled the correspondence and record keeping, covered Congressional hearings, and helped put out Institute publications. They often prepared letters and articles for Collier's signature, did research, and acted as his spokeswomen. This was necessary because most of the Institute's activity was in Washington and Collier spent most of his time in New York City. Collier's main assistants were Deloris (Coulter) Cogan, Betty (Winquest) Cooper, Martha (Lowsley) Jay, and Grace Volk.

Budgetary problems, as well as politics, influenced the programs and projects of the Institute. The major sources of income were membership contributions, foundation grants, and receipts from the sale of publications. Funding was always a problem. Through 1950 the Institute was able to maintain an office in Washington and a full-time staff of two. Fund raising became difficult, however, when the Commissioner of Internal Revenue ruled that contributions to the Institute were not tax deductible. Collier believed that the negative tax rulings were related to the Navy's displeasure with the Institute's work in the Pacific. Although the Institute was able to attract several wealthy contributors, it was never able to amass a substantial financial base for its activities.

As sources of funding dwindled, Collier and his assistants began to work on a volunteer basis. The Institute was forced to give up its office and work out of the homes of Mrs. Cooper and Mrs. Jay in the Washington, D.C., area. These factors limited the operations of the Institute and from 1954 to 1956 it became less active. Although the Institute maintained bank accounts and filed tax papers into the early 1960s, by 1956 it had largely ceased to function as an organization. Collier remained busy, however, and continued to pursue the same goals and interests.

In addition to serving as president of the Institute, Collier taught college courses in anthropology and sociology. He was professor of sociology at the City College of New York from 1947 to 1954 and professor of anthropology at Knox College from 1955 to 1956. Part Three contains material relating to his teaching career and private life.

SERIES I CORRESPONDENCE, 1944-1957

This series contains letters to and from Collier and the IEA staff. Although some of the letters are of a purely personal nature, the vast majority are concerned with the founding of the Institute; others deal with routine functions of the Institute such as soliciting and acknowledging memberships. Correspondence of a more substantial nature is concerned with Institute programs and projects, including letters from Collier and his assistants to many political figures, leaders of public opinion, and publications.

Much of the correspondence is concerned with American Indian affairs. Collier carried on an extensive correspondence with many people who shared his opposition to the general Indian policies of the United States in the late 1940s and 1950s. Much of this correspondence concerns specific controversies and problems. Collier also corresponded with many groups of Indians and was in close touch with many Indian rights organizations such as the Association on American Indian Affairs and the National Congress of American Indians. Collier's interest in Indian affairs in Central and South America is reflected in his correspondence with Manuel Gamio and Juan Comas concerning the Instituto Indigenista Interamericano and the National Indian Institute of the United States.

The IEA's program in Guam and the Pacific Trust Territory forms another major topic of correspondence. Collier and his assistants carried on an extensive correspondence with many native Guamanians including Concepcion C. Barrett, Jose M. Flores, Francisco B. Leon Guerrero, Simon A. Sanchez, and A.B. Won Pat; and native Samoans Peter Tali Coleman, Tele Tautalatala and M.T. Tuiasopo. Much of this correspondence concerns recruiting members for IEA, lobbying activity, and ascertaining the political, economic, and social conditions of the islands. There is also a large amount of correspondence about Guam and the Pacific Trust Territory with many individuals and publications.

Other topics of correspondence include the case of Dihdwo Twe of Liberia, the Point Four Program, and the Technical Cooperation Administration. There is some correspondence about the Spanish Speaking Peoples Program and the United Nations. Collier's views on the social sciences, action research, and general philosophical questions are explored in his extensive correspondence with H. Adrian C. Dobbs, Ronald Lippitt, and Ward Shepard. Collier's interest in autonomous groups and communities is explored with the above mentioned correspondents, as well as with Maria Rogers.

Also of interest in this series are letters planning strategy and tactics to achieve the Institute's goals. The correspondence between Collier and his assistants is particularly valuable in this regard and provides many insights into Collier's methods and motivations. This correspondence also reveals the frustrations and difficulties encountered in implementing the Institute's programs.

Among the significant correspondents in this series are:

Correspondence in this series is arranged alphabetically by the last name of the author. Letters by Collier are filed under the last name of the addressee. Letters by Collier's assistants and by his second wife, Dr. Laura Thompson, are filed as if they were written by Collier.

Correspondence between Collier and his assistants is filed together under the general heading of "Institute of Ethnic Affairs." Miscellaneous letters have been placed in folders for each letter of the alphabet.

Carbon copies of some letters in this series may also be found in Series II. Series II contains some correspondence relating to the National Indian Institute. Series III contains some correspondence relating to IEA's difficulties with the Commissioner of Internal Affairs and some letters ordering Institute publications. Additional correspondence with some of the people listed in this series may be found in Parts I, II, and IV.

SERIES II PROGRAMS AND PROJECTS, 1937, 1940-1958

Collier's and the Institute's intense interest in non-self-governing territories and underdeveloped countries is reflected in Series II PROGRAMS AND PROJECTS. This series contains a wide variety of material on subjects which constituted the main program of the Institute. The series is arranged into eight subject areas. Although the amount and type of material in these eight sections varies widely, most sections contain statements by the Institute and others promoting or opposing legislation, copies of letters to politicians and publications, copies of legislation, press releases, articles, and newspaper clippings. The "American Indian" subject area is by far the largest of the eight subject areas. The following is an outline of each subject area and materials relating to it in Series II.

1. American Indians, 1948-1958

Collier devoted twenty-five years to working for the Indian and was alarmed by the general trends in United States Indian policy in the late 1940s and 1950s. He was concerned that many reforms instituted while he was Commissioner of Indian Affairs were being abandoned and that treaties were in danger of abrogation. Thus, he and the Institute found themselves battling an onslaught of legislation that threatened Indian treaty rights, lands, and civil liberties. They successfully opposed a "rider" to the Navajo-Hopi rehabilitation bills that would have taken away many of the Indians' rights and privileges. They also opposed the "Bosone resolution," which authorized a study to determine which Indian tribes were "competent" to be "set free" from federal supervision.

Perhaps the most serious threat to the Indian, however, was the "termination" bills (to end federal responsibilities for Indian tribes) that were part of the government's policy in the 1950s. The Institute worked hard to modify or defeat a number of these bills and, in addition, proposed legislation of its own. One bill proposed by the Institute would have required the consent of Indian tribes before any change was made in their relationship with the federal government.

Collier and the Institute also kept up with the activities of the Bureau of Indian Affairs. Collier was strongly opposed to the policies of Dillon S. Meyer, Commissioner of Indian Affairs in the early 1950s and a leading proponent of the "termination" program. He and Meyer engaged in a dispute over proposed attorney contract regulations that would have restricted the right of Indian tribes to freely retain the attorneys of their choice.

So much of the Institute's time was consumed in these unforeseen campaigns that it was unable to begin its planned study of American Indian administration. In 1951 and 1952, however, the Institute did publish the Southwest Indian News Letter, a small newspaper designed to keep Indian tribes informed about important legislation and subjects of common interest. Lack of support from some Indian tribes and financial difficulties forced the Institute to halt publication.

This section contains material relating to some Indian tribes and to legislation affecting Indians. This material includes copies of letters and bills, reports on bills, and IEA position statements. There are also a number of press releases which were used to rally support for IEA positions. Also included are many "letters to the editor" by Collier and the IEA staff on Indian topics and legislation.

This section has been grouped into a number of subsections, including sections on specific Indian tribes or groups of Indians. Most of the subsections concern bills, laws, or policies that the Institute was promoting or opposing. Other subsections deal with policies of the Bureau of Indian Affairs and other Indian topics.

2. National Indian Institute, 1937-1952

The National Indian Institute (NII) was an organization created by executive order in 1941 as the United States representative in the Inter-American Indian Institute, a group devoted to the welfare of all Indians in the western hemisphere. When Congress failed to fund the National Indian Institute in 1945 and 1946, the Secretary of the Interior transferred its administration to the Institute of Ethnic Affairs. While NII was associated with the Institute various projects were carried out, including a linguistic survey of Guatemalan Indians and recording Indian music in Mexico. The Interior Department reassumed responsibility for NII in 1950.

There are few papers in this section relating to the projects that were carried out while NII was under the direction of the Institute. There is, however, a great deal of correspondence, memoranda and other materials relating to the founding of NII and the Inter-American Indian Institute, and the transfer of NII to the Institute of Ethnic Affairs. Much of this material dates from 1941 to 1945, and is not part of IEA's records; it has been kept with the post-1945 Institute material because it is closely related to it. Also included in this section are agendas and minutes of NII board meetings and materials on the first and second Inter-American Conferences on Indian Life in 1940 and 1948.

3. Guam/Pacific Trust Territory, 1945-1956

The Institute was very active in seeking the transfer of the administration of Guam, American Samoa and the Trust Territory of the Pacific from the Department of the Navy to the Department of the Interior. It worked for the passage of organic acts for these territories and supported greater civil liberties and opportunities for their peoples. The Institute's program on Guam was very ambitious, with active recruitment and a large membership. A newspaper, the Guam Echo, was published for members on Guam.

This section contains copies of bills, reports on bills, and statements by Collier and the Institute on Guam and the Trust Territory of the Pacific. Most of these materials are arranged into groups by sessions of the United States Congress; there are six groups for the 79th through 84th Congresses. This section also includes materials on the Guam Assembly "walkout" protest in 1949, the Hoover Commission report on Guam and American Samoa, and the United States Commercial Company's economic survey of Micronesia. A number of "letters to the editor" by Collier and others are in this section.

4. Liberia, 1950-1952

Collier and the Institute became deeply involved with Dihdwo Twe, a Kru tribesman and leader of the Liberian aborigines. Twe attempted to run for president of Liberia in 1951, but was disqualified on a technicality and charged with sedition. Collier and the Institute worked to mobilize international support for Twe to assure his safety. They also worked to publicize what they considered to be the "dictatorship" of Liberian President Tubman.

This section contains copies of press releases and "letters to the editor" concerning Liberia and Dihdwo Twe. Pamphlets and newspaper clippings about Liberia are also included in this section.

5. Point Four Program, 1949-1950

Collier and the Institute supported the Point Four Program, President Truman's "Marshall Plan" for underdeveloped countries. Collier was concerned, however, about the potentially disastrous social and economic upheavals that could result from poorly planned and administered Point Four Programs. He and the Institute planned to study similar enterprises and analyze their successes and failures. They hoped to determine how such programs could be made most compatible with the aspirations and human welfare of the native populations.

This section contains plans for the "case records" study of Point Four type enterprises and a number of statements by Collier on the program.

6. Spanish Speaking Peoples Program, 1945-1948

In 1946 the Institute took over the property, records, funds, and personnel of the Spanish Speaking Peoples Project of the Office of Inter-American Affairs. The Institute planned to pursue a program that would encourage self-improvement among Spanish speaking people and make both public and private agencies aware of the problems of Spanish speaking minorities. Funding for the program was exhausted in 1947.

Few records of this project were found in the Institute's files. This section does, however, contain some letters, memoranda, minutes and notes relating to the project.

7. Technical Cooperation Administration, 1951-1952

Collier and the Institute agreed to prepare handbooks on Burma, Ethiopia, and North Africa for the Technical Cooperation Administration (TCA). These handbooks--to be based on field studies by psychologists, anthropologists and others--were intended to provide technical assistance workers in foreign aid programs with information on the peoples and cultures of Ethiopia, Libya, and Eritrea. Contracts were signed, outlines and budgets prepared, and personnel hired. Before field research began, however, the TCA abruptly cancelled the contracts. No reason was given, but Collier believed the cancellation was due to opposition in the State Department to the use of social scientists in foreign aid programs.

This section includes duplicate copies of some correspondence relating to the Institute's handbook project, plans and outlines for the handbooks, copies of agreements with the TCA, budgets, and reports.

8. United Nations, 1945-1947

Collier and the Institute were deeply interested in the United Nations. Indeed, immediately after the founding of the Institute Collier was named alternate advisor to Abe Fortas, then Undersecretary of the Interior and member of the American delegation to the General Assembly of the United Nations. Collier and Fortas, along with John Foster Dulles and Ralph J. Bunche, worked to bring the problems of dependent peoples and the questions of trusteeships and mandates before the Assembly. They succeeded in getting a resolution passed that supported the political, economic, social and educational advancement of non-self-governing peoples. Although Collier did not attend the General Assembly as a representative of the Institute, he kept Institute members informed about Assembly proceedings and acted in harmony with the Institute's goals.

This section contains letters and memoranda by Collier on his experiences as a member of the American delegation to the General Assembly of the United Nations in London in 1945. Also included in this section are plans for an International Scientific Institute for the Advancement of Underdeveloped Areas.

SERIES IV ADDRESSES AND WRITINGS, 1943-1957

The fourth series contains articles, speeches, notes, and manuscripts by Collier. It should be noted that Series II and III also contain many memoranda, statements, and articles by Collier which could be classified as writings. This series, however, contains copies of most of Collier's published and many unpublished writings from 1945 to 1956. There are a number of drafts, arranged in no definite order, of a manuscript on action research case studies (no. 1133). Apparently these manuscripts were prepared for the Institute's Point Four project.

This series also contains a number of Collier's poems, lecture notes and other teaching materials, and autobiographical and philosophical writings. There is a section of writings by Collier's wife, Dr. Laura Thompson, at the end of the series, including manuscripts for The Hopi Way, The Hopi Crisis, and Personality and Government.

Addresses and articles by Collier have been arranged alphabetically and are placed first in this series. Filed next are notes by Collier and his action research manuscripts, Indians of the Americas and Patterns and Ceremonials. Poetry by Collier, autobiographical and philosophical writings and reviews are placed next. These are followed by a section of teaching materials and lectures of Collier. At the end of the series is a section of writings by Collier's second wife, Dr. Laura Thompson.

The fourth part of the John Collier Papers covers the years 1957 to 1968. Although officially retired, Collier remained busy writing books and articles and maintaining an extensive correspondence. After teaching anthropology at Knox College in 1955-1956, he settled in Taos, New Mexico. He and his second wife, Dr. Laura Thompson, were amicably divorced in 1956, and in 1957 he married his assistant and secretary, Grace Volk. Collier died in May 1968, a few days after his 84th birthday. There is very little material in this part from the two years prior to his death.

Part IV has been divided into two series.

Series I. Correspondence, 1956-1966

Series II. Notes, Writings, and Personal Papers, 1911-1965

Each series will be described in detail.

SERIES I CORRESPONDENCE, 1956-1966

This series contains letters to and from Collier and Grace Volk Collier. Mrs. Collier often wrote and answered letters for her husband; her letters are filed under Collier. Although the Institute of Ethnic Affairs was without funds and inactive, Collier continued to work for many of its goals. Most of his time was devoted to the Indians of the western hemisphere, as evidenced by the many letters relating to Indian affairs. There are many letters from Indians and their attorneys asking for help in lawsuits and disputes, as well as letters from students and scholars asking for Collier's assistance in research on the Indian Reorganization Act and related topics. Other correspondence is related to Collier's books and writings. There is some purely personal correspondence.

Among the significant correspondents in this series are:

Willard Walcott Beatty	Earl Hawley Robinson
Rachel Louise Carson	Maria Rogers
Albert Ellis	Eleanor Roosevelt
Abe Fortas	Emil J. Sady
Manuel Gamio	Michael Scott
Rafael Girard	Clarence Senior
Joe Jennings	Elizabeth Shepley Sergeant
Oliver LaFarge	Ward Shepard

D'Arcy McNickle	Dihdwo Twe
Carey McWilliams	Stewart Lee Udall
George Marshall	Dorothy Van de Mark
Virginia Mishnun	George Wald
Gardner Murphy	Henry Agard Wallace
Philleo Nash	Gil Wilson
