

Education Magazine Archive

First-of-its-kind collection provides unique primary source insights into the history of education

Education Magazine Archive offers unprecedented digital access to the archives of leading education trade magazines of the 20th century, covering multiple aspects of the history of education of this period, with magazines devoted to a range of educational levels, topics, and audiences. The availability of this material enables researchers to explore multiple perspectives on the key events of the age and opens up countless new opportunities for research in the history of education, as well as on related subjects such as social history, childhood studies, psychology, and politics.

This first-of-its-kind collection provides unique primary source insights into the history of education, disclosing contemporary debates around professional practice, priorities, values, and controversies during this period. On completion, Education Magazine Archive will comprise 26 publications and approximately 850,000 full color page images, each article individually indexed with fully searchable text. Every title has a deep backfile, with the earliest content dating from 1910.

Historical education trade magazines are recognized as indispensable primary sources through which to interrogate and interpret myriad aspects of the history of education, providing a window on the contemporary debates around professional practice, priorities, values, and controversies in education during this period.

Subjects Include:

- Early learning through to higher education
- Vocational and independent schools
- Distance learning
- Subject-specific titles, plus those aimed at educational leaders
- Material devoted to women and other ethnic groups

Why Education Magazine Archive?

- 26 key publications in the field of education
- 850,000 full page images
- Deep backfiles with coverage from the first issue
- Scanned in full color with searchable text
- Cross-searchable on the ProQuest platform with many complementary resources

To learn more or request a free trial, visit:
proquest.com/pdpq/Education-Magazine-Archive

proquest.com