Trends and Policy: U.S. Criminal Justice

integrates diverse content sources into a unique interface, connecting U.S. criminal justice policies with trending outcomes. This collection encompasses public laws, legislative reports, executive data, press releases, and historical news articles. Our design features timelines and contextual topic pages for laws, concepts, and events, along with rekeyed statistical content for comprehensive research.

Researchers currently rely on disparate tools to access essential executive and legislative content on U.S. criminal justice policies, often struggling to find and utilize statistical data. Our collection bridges this gap by consolidating primary source content related to U.S. criminal justice policy, incorporating federal government statistics and data, and presenting it within the context of topic pages, timelines, and newspaper articles.
